Condemns "Race Suicide" and Points Out Duties of Heads of Families.

ADMIRATION FOR THE WOMEN

Immense Audience Packs Church in Which National Congress is Held.

by President Roosevelt was the feature of the evening session of the National Congress of Mothers, now holding its triennial convention at the Metropolitan Methodist Episconal Church, There was an Immense attendance. The President was formally introduced to the audience by Mrs. Frederick Schoff, of Philadelphia, the president of the Congress. He read his speech, but occasionally interjected some extemporaneous remarks to emphasize a point. The President spoke as

In our modern industrial civilization there are many and grave dangers to counterbalance the splender and the triumphs. It is not a good thing to see cities grow at disproportionate speed relatively to the country; for the small land owners, the men who own their little homes, and therefore to a small land owners, the heat series in their little homes, and therefore to a very large extent the men who till farms, the men of the soil, have hitheren made the foundation of, lasting national life in every State; and, if the foundation becomes either too weak or too mirrow, the superstructure, no matter how attractive, is in imment danger of failing.

But far more important than the question of the occupation of our citizens is the question of how their family life is conducted. No matter what in the coupation may be, as long as there is a real home had as long as there is a real home had as long as there is a real home had as long as their duty to one another, to their might consequence whether the man's trade is plied in the country or the city, whether it calls for the work of the hands or for the work of the head.

The Home and the Family.

The Home and the Family.

The Home and the Family.

But the nation is in a bad way if there is no real home, if the family is not of the right kind; if the man is not a good husband and father, if he is brutal or cowardly or selfish, if the woman has lost her sense of duty, if she is sunk in vapid self-indulgence or has let her nature be twisted so that she prefers a sterile pseudo-intellectuality to that great and beautiful development of character swhich comes only to those whose lives know the fullness of duty done, of effort made and self-sacrifice undergone.

In the last analysis the welfare of the State lepends absolutely upon whether or not the absolutely upon whether or not the average family, the average man ind woman and their children, represent the kind of citizenship fit for the foundation of a great nation; and if we fail to appreciate this we fail to appreciate the voil morality upon which all healthy civilization is based.

No piled-up wealth, no spilender of material growth, no brillance of artistic development, will permanently avail any people unless its home life is healthy, unless the average man possesse honesty, ourage, common sense and decency, unless he workshard and is willing at need to fight, hard; and unless the average woman is a good wife, a good mother, able and willing to perform the first and greatest duty of womanhood, able and willing to bear, and to bring up as they should be brought up, healthy children, sound in body, mind, and character, and numerous enough so that the race shall increase and not decrease.

Old Truths Still True.

Old Truths Still True.

Old Truths Still True.

There are certain old truths which will be true as long as this world endures, and which no amount of progress can alter. One of these is the truth that the primary duty of the bread-winner for his wife and children, and that the primary duty of the woman is to be the helpment, the housewife and mother. The woman should have ample educational advantages; but save in exceptional cases the man must be, and she need not be, and generally ought not to be, trained for a lifelong career as the family bread-winner; and, therefore, after a certain point the training of the two must normally be different because the dutles of the two are normally different. This does not mean inequality of function, but it does mean that normally there must be dissimilarity of function. On the whole, I think the duty of the two and the more important, the more difficult, and the more honorable of the two on the whole. I respect the woman whole I think the duty of the woman the mere important, the more difficult, and the more important, the more difficult, and the more honorable of the two on the whole I respect the woman who does her duty even more than I respect the man who does his. No ordinary work done by a man is either as hard or as responsible as the work of a woman who is bringing up a family of small chidren; for upon her time and strength demands are made not only every hour of the day but often every hour of the night. She may have to get up night after night to take care of a sick child, and yet must by day continue to do all her household duties as well; ad if the family means are scant she must usually enjoy even her rare holidays taking her whole brood of children with her. The birthpanks make all men the debtors of all women. Above all our sympathy and regard are due to the struggling wives among those whom Abraham Incoin called the plain people, and whom he so loved and trusted; for the lives of these women are often led on the lonely heights of quiet, self-sacrificing heroism.

Work of the Mother.

Work of the Mother.

Just as the happiest and most honorable and most useful task that can be set any man is to earn enough for the support of his wife and family, for the bringing up and starting in life of his children, so the most important, the most honorable and desirable task which can be set any woman is to be a good and wise mother in a home marked by self-respect and mutua forhearance, by willingness to perform duty, and by refusal to sink into self-indulgence or avoid that which entails effort and self-sacrifice. Of course there are ex-self-sacrifice. Of course there are exceptional men and exceptional women who can do and ought to do much more than this, who can lead and ought to lead great careers of outside usefulness in addition to-not as substitutes for-their home work; but I am not speaking of exceptions: I am speaking of the primary duties I am speaking of the primary duties I am speaking of the average citizens, the work man assemblage of mothers I shall have nothing whatever to say in praise of an easy life. Yours is the work which is never ended. No nother has an easy time, and most mothers have very hard times; and yet what true mother would barter her experience of joy and sorrow in exchange for a life of cold selfishness, which insists upon perpetual amusement and the avoidance of care, and which often finds if did welling place in some flat designed to furnish with the least possible expenditure of effort the maximum of comfort and of luxury, but in which there is literally no place for children?

The woman who is a good wife, a good mother, is entitled to our respect as is no one clea: but she is entitled to it only because, and so long as she is worthy of it. Effort and self-sacrifice are the law of worthy life for the man is for the woman who as for the other. I do not in the least believe in the patient Grisela type of woman, in the woman who submits to gross and long continued ill treatment, any more than I believe in who should arouse every tender feeling in his nature. Selfishness towards them, lack of tenderness towards them should arouse avery tender feeling in his nature. Selfishness towards them,

'Admiration for Them .

Admiration for Them.

I believe in the woman's keeping her self-respect Just as I believe in the man's doing so. I believe in the man's and, indeed, a little more; and I regard marriage as a partnership in which each partner la in honor bound to think of the rights of the other as well as of his or her own. But I think that the duties are even more important than the lights, and in the long run I think that the duties are even more important than the lights, and in the long run I think that the reward is ampler and greater for duty well done, than for the insistence upon individual rights, necessary though this, too, must often be. Your duty is hard, your responsibility great; but greatest of all is your reward. I do not pity y't in the least. On the contrary, I feel respect and admiration for you.

Into the woman's keeping is committed the destiny of the generations to come after us. In bringing up your children you mothers must remember that while it is essential to be living and tonder it is no less esential to be wise and affection must not be ireated as interchangeable terms; and besides training your sons and daughters in the softer and milder virtues you must seek to give them those stern and hardy qualities which in after ille they will surely need. Some children will go wrong in spite of the best training; and some will go right even when their surroundings are most unfortunate; nevertheless an immense amount depends upon the family weakness bring up your sons to be selfish and to think only of themselves, you will be responsible for much sadness among the women who are to be thoir wives in the future. If you mothers grow up in the solution to her heavy weakness bring up your sons to be selfish and to think only of themselves, you will be responsible for much sadness among the women who are to be thoir wives in the future. If you mother's grow up in the solution to her wives in the future, if you tery your sons to be selfish and to think only of themselves, you will be responsible for much sadness weak

Race Suicide.

There are many good people who are denied the supreme blessing of children, and for these we have the respect and sympathy always due to those who from no fault of their own are denied any of the other great blessings of life. But the man or woman who deliberately forgoes these blessings, whether from viclousness, coldness, shallow-heartedness, self-indugence, or more failure to apprepate aright the difference between the all-important and the unimportant—why.

such a creature merits contempt as hearty as any visited upon the soldier who runs away in battle, or upon the min who refuses to work for the support of those dependent upon him, and who though ablebedded is yet content to eat in idleness the bread which of the system of the creation of the type forms one of the most unpleasant and inwholesome features of modern life. If anyone is so dim of vision as to fail to see what a theroughly unlovely creature such a woman is I wish they would read Judge Robert Grant's novel. "Unleavened Broad" ponder soriously the chiarattest would surely overcome any nation which developed its average and typical woman less that it also exists in American life is woman less that it also exists in American life is made unrheisantly evident by the statistics as so the dwindling families in some localities. It is made evident in equally sinister fashion by the census statistics as to the dwindling families in some localities, it is made evident in equally sinister fashion by the census statistics as to divorce, which are fairly appalling; for easy divorce is now as it ever has been, a bane to any nation, a curse to society, a menace to the limb, and to lumerality, an evil thing for minimum and a still more hideous evil for women. These unpleasant tendencies in our American life are made evident by articles such as those which I actually read not long ago in a certain paper, where a clergyman was quoted, seemingly with approval, as expressing the general American actitude when he said that the ambition of any save a very rion man should be for car two children only, so las to give his children an opportunity. This man, whose profession and calling should have made him a moral teacher, actually set before others the foreintry, not of allowing them the opportunity, and giving them the privilege of making their own place in the world, but, forsooth, of keeping the number of children so limited that they might "taste a few good things!" The way to give a child a fair chance in life is not to selfish and sordid theory that the whole end of life "is to taste a few good things."

The intelligence of the remark is on a par with its morality, for the most rudimentary mental process would have shown the speaker that if the average family in which there are children contained but two clidren the Nation as a whole would decrease in population so rapidly that in two or three generations it would very deservedly be on the point of extinction, so that the people who had acted on this base and selfish doctrine would be giving place to others with braver and more robust ideals. Nor would such a result be in any way regrettable; for a race that practiced such doctrine—that is, a race that practiced race suicide—would thereby conclusively show that it was unfit to exist, and that it had better give place to people who of their being.

The Inevitable Result.

The Inevitable Result.

The Inevitable Result.

To sum up, then, the whole matter is simple enough. If either a race or an individual profers the pleasures of mere effortles's case, of self-indufinitely higher pleasures that come to finitely higher pleasures that come to those who know the toll and the wearlness, but also the loy, of hard duty well done, why, that race or that individual must inevitably in the end pay the penalty of leading a life both vapid and ignoble. No man and no woman really worthy of the name can care for the life spent solely or chiefly in the avoidance of risk and trouble and labor. Save in exceptional cases the prizes worthy having in life must be paid for, and the life worth living must be a life of work for a worthy orders than for one's self.

The man is but a poor creature whose effort is not rather for the betterment of his wife and children than for himself; and as for the mother, her very name stands for loving unselfishness and self-abnegation, and, in any society fit to exist, is fraught with associations which render, it holy.

The woman's task is not easy—no task worth doing it, and when she has done it, there shall come to her the highest and having done it, she shall have the reward 1 lopnesied in Scripture; for hehusband and her children, yes, and all people who realize that her work lies at the foundation of all national happiness and greatness, shall rise up and call her blessed.

Captain Daugherty was as brave a soldler as over drow sword in defense of the Confederacy. He served in the Old Dominion Dragoons, Fitz Lee's cavalry, and displayed in the battle of Kelly's Ford remarkable heroism. He and Washington Young, of Dinwiddle, a fellow member of his company, led the charge, Just before reaching the stonewall they discovered that they were alone, the company having withdrawn. They turned to retreat and Young was shot down, a bullet entering one ear and going out of the other. Although shells were falling all about him Daugherty stopped, picked up the body of his comrade and bore it from the field. He was wounded, and being sent to Richmond remained at the home of the late Captain Thomas Cunningnam until he recovered.

Due to Dispute Over a Fence.

The spectacular and fatal battle was due to a neighborhood dispute over a line fence between Shissler and the Sills, his next-door neighbors. The controversy continued many months and became more and more intense. Shissler, who was employed by the Halleck Lumber Company as a laborer yesterday morning telephoned his employers there would be trouble during the day. Inasmuch as he was considered eccentric, no attention was paid the warning. At filten minutes after 11 o'clock Shissler crossed his yard, armed with a repeating rific, entered the Sill home and shot Sill dead, boring a hole through his head. Mrs. Sill attempted to fight the intruder, but Shissler shot and killed her without a word.

Returning to his own home, Shissler secured a can of kerosene, emptied if upon the Sill house, applied a match and stod off the crowd which gathered while the place burned. The fire and spolice departments rushed to the spot but Shissler shot at every head that appeared. After the Sill house was beyond aid, Shissler retreated to his own home.

A patrol wagon dashed up to the hurning house and Pollee Surgeon Dual clambered out. As he did so Shisaler sent a bullet through his abdomen. Pollee Captain Behanna attempted to catch the falling surgeon and a rifle ball tore through both his legs. Next an ambulance horse was shot.

A riot call was turned in and the sheriff's forces arrived. With the maniac firing at them constantly they managed to drag Bohanna and Dulin to safety. Volleys were poured into the Shission house. It having been ascertained the murderer was alone. While two squads of officers raked the house from different directions an attacking party, pushing bales of hay for breastworks, came near the Shissier house and opened general fire. There was no respons, and they rushed the place. The mirderer had been writing a letter. He was wounded in many places, and one bullet had passed through his brain.

The house, which had been set on fire by the fushade, was saved after the dying murderer had been carried out.

At this moment his wife returned from church. When told of the tragedy she collaosed with heart disease and will likely die.

The first year I spont in Richmond, 1902, I occupied a furnished house. The books in the office of the commissioner of revenue for the city of Richmond, as per his certificate, show personal property listed for taxation in Richmond for 1904 (really for the year 1903), $2,500, or which property, books and portraits are non-taxable.

In Fairfax county for 1904, piano, which appears and is valued at $50, is an old helrjoon in my family, and, I think, of no value other than a sentimental que,
